The template is then copied into the schematic. Assembling the Template The second step in creating a finished assembly drawing is to assemble the template. You can either create the template from scratch or use an existing drawing that you'll convert to a template. You have two methods available: DraftSight (the default option) and Trig. If you're using DraftSight, follow these steps to create the template. (I describe using Trig in the next section.) 1. Choose Create ► Templates from the Templates pane of the DraftSight workspace. 2. The Creating Templates dialog box appears. 3. Select the button next to the option DraftSight was set to as the Default DraftSight template in the DraftSight workspace, and then click the Create button.

DraftSight opens the Create Templates dialog box, as shown in Figure 3-5. 4. In the AutoCAD Area list, choose an area to which you want to apply the template, such as the drawings for the connector assemblies or a desktop. Figure 3-5: In the

Create Templates dialog box, choose where to apply the template and then click OK. 5. If you're creating the template for the first time, you're prompted to enter a name for the template. Choose a name for the template to represent the drawing that you're creating. 6. Click OK. DraftSight creates the template in the drawing you chose in Step 4. Using a template Using a template saves you from creating drawings for templates that you're going to use over and over again. After you've created the drawing, you can apply it as a template in the next drawing you create. To apply a template to a drawing, follow these steps: 2. The Create Templates dialog box appears. 3. Select the template you want to use, and click the OK button. 82157476af
